

The Job MATCHUP

Planning an effective work search will not only help you return to work quicker, it also is an eligibility requirement for receiving unemployment benefits.

To make the most out of your work search, use the following strategies:

- Match the type of work you are seeking to the type of work that is available in your area
- Match your wage expectations to the industry expectation in your search area
- Match the hours you are available to work with the hours that are offered for the type of work you are seeking
- Match your skill set to the skills required for the type of work you are seeking

NOT A MATCH

If you have a mismatch in one of the areas above, it may be necessary to: expand the distance you are willing to travel to find suitable work, be more flexible with wage expectations, or change the type of work you are seeking. Failure to make a realistic search for suitable work may result in a denial of unemployment benefits.
